3. Justification and Requirements for the Course. (Make a brief statement to justify the need for the course)
A. Justification: The body of literature read in this upper division survey course introduces students in English, Performing Arts, and across CSUCI to the study of modern American dramatic literature in performance and production from the beginning of the 20th century to the present. The nature of this interdisciplinary course complements the other cross-listed and upper division English and Performing Arts elective courses specializing in drama and theatre. This is an elective 3 unit GE course in C2 and UDIGE.

B. Degree Requirement: ☒ Requirement for the Major/Minor ☒ Elective for the Major/Minor Note: Submit Program Modification if this course changes your program.

4. Learning Objectives. (Bullets, will occur upon carriage return)
Upon completion of the course, the student will be able to:
• Read critically and analyze literary texts
• Express their interpretations of literary texts in oral and written form
• Demonstrate increased familiarity with the development of American dramatic literature in the latter part of its evolution
• Discuss differences across texts and performances of these texts
• Analyze a theme using multiple performance texts
• Analyze texts as works of literature and vehicles for performance.
• Identify the uniqueness and commonality of these writers’ accomplishments
• Locate their own place in their own and in the wider theatrical and cultural landscape

5. Course Content in Outline Form. [Be as brief as possible, but use as much space as necessary]
I. Read and discuss performance texts in light of the theme(s) for the course.
II. Produce critical/analytical writing in response to certain assigned texts for class reading.
III. Write a research paper analyzing the cultural, literary and performative aspects of the plays.
IV. Evaluate and discuss modern American drama and theatre within contemporary and historically significant perspectives
V. Perform staged readings of extracts from the plays.
VI. Mid-Term and Final exams based on class lectures, discussions and prescribed readings.

Criteria and Justifications Submitted:

- Develop students' ability to respond subjectively as well as objectively to experience
  Students will read plays and performance texts written by modern American authors from the beginning of the 20th century until today, and study a range of American dramatic literature in the context of the development of American theatrical performance. For their analyses students will discuss theoretical narratives and paradigms, and consider them in light of their own personal perspectives. Students will be encouraged to develop their own individual viewpoints.

- Cultivate and refine students' affective, cognitive, and physical faculties through studying great works of the human imagination
  In order to develop aesthetic awareness, the material studied by students will include plays and performance texts in performance and production from the beginning of the 20th century to the present. The works will be of a visual and verbal nature, and students will have the opportunity to research, present oral presentations, and produce staged readings.

- Increase awareness and appreciation in the tradition humanistic disciplines such as art, dance, drama, literature, and music.
  The focus of this course is the analysis of dramatic literature by studying how it is treated in performance and production, and how it integrates the different forms of the performing arts, such as music, dance, and theatre. Students will view staged productions and read relevant critical and theoretical literature.

- Examine the interrelationship between the creative arts, the humanities, and self
  This course connects the performing arts (music, dance, and theatre) with dramatic literature through analysis, discussion and research. Students will have the opportunity to contextualize the performances and productions from the beginning of the 20th century to the present, against their own personal experiences and observations, and invest their own opinions in the discussions.

- Include an exposure to world cultures
  In this course students will develop an understanding of world perspectives by reading critical and theoretical literature about American drama, and viewing performances and productions of American drama in different cultures both in translation and in the original language. Students will evaluate the influence of different performance traditions upon American drama, and also discuss the impact of American drama on the drama and theatre of other cultures.

- Involve the student with literary works
  The very nature of this course is to evaluate and discuss modern American dramatic literature and theatre within contemporary and historically significant perspectives. Students will discuss literary forms, dramatic criticism and performance theories in reference to the plays read in the course.

- Promote students' ability to effectively analyze and respond to works of human imagination
  In addition to reading, and discussing the primary works, students will be provided with secondary materials, such as historical, theoretical and critical references, for their use. Students will also develop their own personal reactions. To better understand American drama and theatre, opportunities will be created for the students to write, speak, and perform staged readings of extracts from the plays.
• Require substantive analytical/critical thinking
Students will read critically and analyze several literary texts, and express their interpretations of literary texts in oral and written form. They will discuss differences across texts and performances of these texts, and also analyze a theme using multiple performance texts. Students will study the texts as works of literature and as vehicles for performance. Students will identify the uniqueness and commonality of these writers’ accomplishments. They will explore their own place in both their own and in the wider theatrical and cultural landscape.

Request for ENGL-PATH 341: Modern American Drama and Theatre to be added to GE Category
UDIGE: Upper Division Interdisciplinary GE submitted on 09/12/2008.

Committee Response:
Approved by committee on 11-13-2008

Criteria and Justifications Submitted:

• Emphasize interdisciplinarity by integrating content, ideas, and approaches from two or more disciplines
This is a cross-listed course with English. Literary forms, theories, and criticisms will provide a context for the discussion of these plays in performance and production. The ways in which literary trends shaped the dramaturgical choices employed by the playwright(s) will be discussed. Dramatic criticism and performance theories will shed light on the literary analysis of the plays read in the course.

• Include substantive written work consisting of in-class writing as well as outside class writing of revised prose. Examples of appropriate written work include: short papers, long papers, term papers, lab reports, documentation, disciplinary-based letters and memos, and essays.
As part of their assessment students will have to research critical and theoretical prose to write a comprehensive term paper. Mid-term and Final exams will include short and long essays. Students will also write personal responses to the plays and performance pieces studied in class. There will also be oral presentations and staged readings.
Program/Course: Engl-Path 341

If your course has a General Education Component or involves Center affiliation, the Center will also sign off during the approval process.
