3. Justification and Learning Objectives for the Course.

   “Never before in American history have U.S. businesses, large and small, been so deeply involved in and affected by international business. A global economic boom, unprecedented in modern economic history, has been under way as the drive for efficiency, productivity, and open, unregulated markets sweeps the world.” Cateora and Graham’s Introduction to International Marketing speaks to the importance of a global perspective in marketing. This required course in the Global Emphasis in Business will develop the skills and perspectives that contribute to an environmental/cultural approach to marketing management. International marketing differs from domestic marketing because of the focus on foreign marketing environments and cultures. All businesses operate in a global environment, by virtue of competition with alternative suppliers or pursuit of additional markets. A global frame of reference is a necessity for business success in the 21st century.

   Learning Objectives
   Students who successfully complete this course will be able to:

   - Explain the fundamental concepts of international marketing
   - Explain the impact of culture on international marketing strategies
   - Describe the impact of individual and business consumer behavior on global marketing strategies
   - Compare the pros and cons of global versus single-country strategies
   - Differentiate between the various forms of promotion applied in an international setting
