Request for ECON 111: Principles of Macroeconomics to be added to GE Category D: Social Perspectives.

Committee Response:

Approved by committee on 12-06-2010

Criteria and Justifications Submitted:

- Promote understanding of how the issues relevant to social, political, contemporary/historical, economic, educational or psychological realities interact with each other within the realm of human experience
 - ECON 111 is a valuable introduction to the methodological and concerns of the social sciences and economics in particular. It surveys the scope of our discipline and identifies the broad intellectual and public policy issues which occupy the attention of most of our discipline.
- Focus on how a social science discipline conceives and studies human existence
 The course uses the scientific method to study economic behavior and institutions within which that behavior occurs, and builds skills in critical thinking.
- Address issues using the methods commonly employed by a social science discipline

 Students who successfully complete this course will be able to: •explain the workings of the national economy •describe and apply the scientific method to macroeconomic behavior and the institutions within which that behavior occurs •measure aggregate levels of economic activity •describe the problems of unemployment and inflation •evaluate the costs and benefits of alternative forms of public policy Hence we feel that this course meets each of the criteria in GE category D.
