Please provide a brief explanation of how the proposed course meets each of the criteria for the selected General Education categories.

GEOL 122 focuses upon the geological history of the Earth and the Solar System from the origin of the cosmos to the explosion of Mt. St. Helens, tracing the evolution of the continents and ocean basins, and the broad development of plants and animals through time. Surveys events in Earth's past of relevance to present environmental issues. The course promotes a general understanding of scientific methods and theory building, as well as the limits of scientific inquiry. It provides the content within an historical perspective and the role geology played in the development of modern civilization. Students apply both inductive and deductive reasoning as they explore the fallacies and misconceptions surrounding the interpretation of Earth's geological past.

Students who successfully complete this course will be able to:

- Describe the development of the modern Earth from a geological perspective;
- Outline the ongoing geological processes affecting the Earth;
- Recall a general framework for the evolution of plants and animals.

Hence we feel that this course meets each of the criteria in GE Category B1.
