Criteria Justifications

- Promote understanding of how the issues relevant to social, political, contemporary/historical, economic, educational or psychological realities interact with each other within the realm of human experience

The course focuses on the social, political, economic, and culture of modern Latin American societies, including the continued interaction between indigenous, African, mixed-race, and European cultures, the arrival and impact of liberalism in the nineteenth century, the development of national identities, and the reality of both revolution and repression in the twentieth century.

- Focus on how a social science discipline conceives and studies human existence

The focus of the course is the historical study of the Latin American region. The discipline of history has subdisciplines of economic, political, social, and cultural history, and this course draws on each to study the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

- Address issues using the methods commonly employed by a social science discipline

The course uses primary sources as well as secondary interpretations, which are the tools of historians, to teach students both how historians study the past and how to themselves make historical analyses of Latin America's modern period.
