Justification: The GE details were lost, and are now being specified. The nature of this course qualifies it to be included as a C1 course in the GE category. Like its counterparts, ART 334 The Business of Music (BUS) and ART 434 The Museum (BUS/EDUC), this course complies to the criteria specified for C1. The UDIGE component was approved earlier in the fall. Also a reference text has been added to include a text on theatre. Reference texts on music and dance already exist.

7. ☑ General Education Categories: All courses with GE categories notations (including deletions) must be processed at the GE website: http://summit.csuci.edu/geapproval. Upon completion, the GE Committee will forward your documents to the Curriculum Committee for further processing.

Request for BUS-PA 335: Business and the Performing Arts to be added to GE Category C1: Art

Committee Response:

Approved by committee on 03-19-2009

Criteria and Justifications Submitted:

- Develop students' ability to respond subjectively as well as objectively to experience

  Students will use an interdisciplinary approach to focus on performing arts as a creative activity and as a business activity, exploring elements such as planning, management and financial activities. They will use case studies to analyze a comprehensive view of performing arts organizations, and analyze the purpose and meaning of performing arts in contemporary society. Each student will be encouraged to develop their own individual viewpoints verbally and in written form.

- Cultivate and refine students' affective, cognitive, and physical faculties through studying great works of the human imagination

  The material studied by students will include performances representing dance, music, and theatre. Students will develop aesthetic awareness by studying integrated performances, such as opera, musical theatre, and circus, where dance, music, and theatre are combined. The works will be of a visual and verbal nature, and represent traditional and experimental productions. Students will have the opportunity to research and present oral and written reports, individually and in groups on these subjects.

- Increase awareness and appreciation in the traditional humanistic disciplines such as art, dance, drama, literature, and music

  The focus of this course is the analysis of the relationship between business and the performing arts. Today, in addition to creating performing arts activities (theater, music, dance), students must also appreciate the variety of complex and comprehensive business aspects of performing arts organizations (large and small, profit and non-profit). Students will consider case-studies by viewing staged productions and applying relevant business models.

- Examine the interrelationship between the creative arts, the humanities, and self

  This course connects the performing arts (theater, music, dance), with the business elements integral to its function, through analysis, discussion and research. Students will have the opportunity to contextualize the business elements associated with the performing arts against their own personal experiences and observations. They will also invest their own opinions in the discussions on the diverse productions viewed.

- Include an exposure to world cultures

  In this course students will discuss international perspectives on business elements and procedures in the performing arts. They will compare organizational structures in the performing arts as they are practised in the United States, Europe, Australia, and elsewhere.

- Impart knowledge and appreciation of the visual and performing arts

  The very nature of this course is to consider and study the performing arts, especially theatre, music, and dance, in performance and production. The visual elements will be included in the discussions on staging and financing the staging of the various productions. In looking at the critical evaluation of the performing arts, the monetary value of the performing arts will be considered.

- Promote students' ability to effectively analyze and respond to works of human imagination

  Students will read, view, listen to, and discuss major works representative of the performing arts. Students will be provided with business models for their analyses of individual and group activities within the performing arts. Students will also explore the creative and business aspects of performing arts organizations at a local and national level. Students will investigate how business is intrinsic to the values associated with the success of the performing arts in our society.

Please provide a brief explanation of how the proposed course meets each of the criteria for the selected General Education categories.

1. Cl: ... enable students to develop a basic appreciation of the human imagination and understand the value of personal creativity in a complex, global society. ... exposure to a diverse range of work in art, literature, languages and cultures cultivates the student’s ability to express intellectual and emotional responses and make subjective and objective evaluations. ... stresses the interrelationship between individual aesthetics and collective human sensibility. Numerous teaching methodologies involve active participation in the creative experience, leading to personal inquiries into the cultural diversity prevalent in the visual, audible, kinetic, and oral traditions of human expressions.

2. Upper division interdisciplinary. Emphasize interdisciplinarity by integrating content, ideas, and approaches from two or more disciplines. ... Include substantive written work consisting of in-class writing as well as outside class writing of revised prose.

In order to produce successful artistic productions in theatre, music and dance, performing arts professionals must understand the business elements of performing arts organizations and the intricacies of production values. In addition to creating performing arts activities, students must also appreciate the variety of complex and comprehensive aspects of the performing arts organization. All organizations - both profit seeking and non-profit organizations - must possess and practice business related skills/activities. In the performing arts, that involves an understanding of the arts of theatre, music and dance and the clients—the audience—as well as the performance and business aspects of production.

Students will:
- Describe in writing and via oral presentations the connections between the creative activities and the business activities of performing arts organizations
- Analyze and describe the major elements of planning, management and finance for performing arts organizations
- Demonstrate (in writing and orally) an understanding of the major creative aspects of performing arts organizations
Read and analyze complex cases related to the business functions within performing arts organizations

Students will study:

- Performing arts as an organizational entity
- Creative process within a performing arts organization
- Planning of performing arts
- Management of performing arts
- Finance/accounting for performing arts
- Marketing of performing arts
- Special issues related to non-profit organizations
- Special issues related to performing arts organizations
- Case studies
- Produce a comprehensive/final project that shows understanding of the needs and artistic benefits of the performing arts and a good grasp of the basic elements of the business end of the performing arts.
